POPI CHECKLIST – AT A GLANCE
Step 1: AUDIT	Do an audit of all of the existing information being processed by your business: What information is being collected? <input type="checkbox"/> How is information being collected? <input type="checkbox"/> For what purpose is this information being collected? <input type="checkbox"/> Where is this information stored? <input type="checkbox"/> Review agreements you have with others, especially looking at what the third party's responsibilities are regarding the information you share with them <input type="checkbox"/>	Step 2: CLEAN UP	Remove any information that is no longer required by the business, including information relating to: Customers who are no longer using your services <input type="checkbox"/> Customers who have not consented to being on your database <input type="checkbox"/> Employees who have left the Business <input type="checkbox"/>
Step 3: WRITE UP PROCEDURES	Put in place "best practice" procedures for how you want to move forward: What are our reasons for collecting information? <input type="checkbox"/> How do we intend to safeguard that information? <input type="checkbox"/> How will we respond to our customers if things go wrong? <input type="checkbox"/> For how long will we hang on to information? <input type="checkbox"/> How will we destroy information that we no longer require? <input type="checkbox"/>	Step 4: COMMUNICATE	Communicate your processes to your users. Draft the relevant documents that your customers will need for knowing what's happening to their information. All these documents should be in clear, plain language and accessible to the end users. Some of the documents you might want to look at include: Consent forms <input type="checkbox"/> Privacy policies <input type="checkbox"/> Cookies notices <input type="checkbox"/>

Step 5: T R A I N YOUR PEOPLE	Train everyone in your practice. Even the most robust compliance plan will fail if the people on the ground are not equipped to implement it. Training and education can never be a once-off exercise, and the practice should have some idea of how often and in what way constant training needs to take place. The best way to ensure compliance with your obligations would be to train your people to: Recognise when they are dealing with personal information <input type="checkbox"/> Understand what their own responsibilities are within your practice <input type="checkbox"/> Know who to contact if they have questions or concerns <input type="checkbox"/>

Important things you should know about POPI
Who does POPI apply to?	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• The Act applies to anyone who is processing personal information including dentists.• “Processing” includes collecting, recording, storing, or using information.• “Information” includes names, addresses, biometric information and anything else that identifies a person.• POPI does not apply to any processing of personal information that is used only for personal purposes i.e. not as part of a business or in a public space (like social media).• In a nutshell, POPI will apply to dentists who need to put processes in place to ensure that they are compliant.	How do you get POPI compliant?	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Compliance is much more than just having a privacy policy in place (but, this is certainly better than nothing).• The first step is to understand what your responsibilities are in terms of POPI.• More importantly, you need to understand:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ what personal information you are collecting for your business○ how it is being used○ for what purpose you are using the information you are collecting.• This is not a once-off exercise. You need to constantly monitor your business and make sure that everyone within the business knows what they can or can’t do,

What happens if I don't comply?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • First of all, you could be breaking the law and face criminal liability or a hefty fine. • For less serious offences, the maximum penalty would be a fine, imprisonment for up to 12 months, or a combination of the two. For more serious offences the maximum penalties are a R10-million fine, or imprisonment for a period of up to 10 years, or a combination of both. • The Information Regulator could also order you to take specific steps within a specified period including ordering you to immediately stop processing personal information. • You could also be ordered to pay a monetary amount to the person whose personal information has been abused. • Over and above all this, there is also reputational damage to your business, as customers may not be very likely to want to engage with any business that is abusing their personal information. 	What is a privacy policy?	and what the implications are of not complying. A privacy policy is a roadmap for your customers to see: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • What type of information you are collecting about them; • For what purposes you are collecting this information; • How their information will be used and protected; and • What they can do about changing or deleting their information. A privacy policy is just one step in ensuring that you are compliant with POPI. You could certainly have a privacy policy in place and still not meet all your obligations under POPI, which is why it is important to conduct a full audit of your business to see where your gaps are.
How do I conduct an audit on my business?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • An audit is the first step in performing a "Gap Analysis" on your business. • As a starting point, you would need to sit down and look at things from your customer's experience. • Once you have established what information you are collecting, you would then need to look at how you are collecting this information. • You might be collecting information: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ automatically without asking your customers for their consent (the most usual example of this is when you collect information on your customer's browsing behaviours); or ○ directly from your customers with their consent (like asking them to fill out their details in an order form or sign up to a mailing list). 	What are my obligations in terms of POPI?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The Act requires that all personal information needs to be processed lawfully and in a reasonable manner. • This means that you are not required to have iron-clad fool proof processes in place, but that you must be able to defend your actions if called upon to do so. • In a nutshell, you need to position your business to be able to say "We did everything that could have been reasonably expected in the circumstances to comply with our obligations". It will not be good enough to say that you weren't aware of your obligations or that it wasn't your fault that personal information was abused.

POPI ASSESSMENT CHECKLIST & TEMPLATES FOR DENTISTS

	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Once you have a grasp on what information you are collecting, you need to work out:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ what your customers know about where their information is being stored, sent, and used for.• You are now in a position to compare what you are currently doing against what your obligations are in terms of POPI, and to then address your “Gaps” by making the necessary changes to your business activities to bring it in line with POPI.		<ul style="list-style-type: none">• So, what does it mean to process information “lawfully and reasonably”?• First and foremost - you can only collect information for a:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ Specific○ Explicitly defined○ Lawful purpose• And you must communicate all of these to the person whose information you are collecting.• For example, you cannot collect email addresses from your customers for the purpose of issuing their invoices, and then use those email addresses to market your new business products to them, or worse, sell that information to a third party for that other business to contact your customers.• The important thing to remember is that, as long as people know and understand what they are signing up for, you can continue your business with much less stress. Put differently, if you tell your customers that you would like to send them information about upcoming products or partner services, and they provide their consent for you to do this, you’re pretty much covered.• That said, you must give people the opportunity to “opt-in” to these communications and sharing of their information.

CONDITIONS FOR LAWFUL PROCESSING OF PERSONAL INFORMATION

STEP 1 – APPOINTMENT OF INFORMATION OFFICER	All practices will have to appoint an Information Officer and deputy information officers, if required or applicable but not necessary Register your Information Officer and deputy information officer with the Information Regulator on their electronic portal https://www.justice.gov.za/inforeg/docs.html Complete Online form (regulator presently working through technical glitches) The Information Officer’s Registration Form is available on their website for completion and submission by e-mail (under Documents tab, under “Forms”) https://www.justice.gov.za/inforeg/docs/InfoRegSA-eForm-InformationOfficersRegistration-2021.pdf	The Information Officer are to ensure that they comply with the prescribed responsibilities, ensuring that: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • They develop a framework to ensure compliance, implementation and monitoring. • a personal information impact assessment is done to ensure that adequate measures and standards exist in order to comply with the conditions for the lawful processing of personal information; • a PAIA manual is put in place or updated, as prescribed in sections 14 and 51 of POPIA; • internal measures are developed together with adequate systems to process requests for information or access thereto; and • internal awareness sessions are conducted regarding the provisions of POPIA, regulations made in terms of POPIA, codes of conduct, or information obtained from the Regulator 	Who is the Information Officer in a dental practice? The head of the business or practice is its Information Officer. In a dental practice this will be: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • solo practitioner owner • incorporated practices –sole director or a director designated by the practice with second director as deputy information officer • partnership – the designated partner with fellow partner being the deputy information officer • association practice – all practitioners operating in their own names will have to register themselves as information officers. A practice may also appoint a Deputy Information Officer to assist the Information Officer who may be the employee or practice manager. If you also operate a separate legal entity that owns and leases equipment to the practice, that separate entity must also appoint an Information Officer. The Information Officer must be trained on POPI Act and show this record to the Regulator when required.
STEP 2 ASSESS THE CURRENT RECORDS OF PERSONAL INFORMATION IN YOUR PRACTICE	Assess and compile a list of the personal information you currently process in your practice	Possible Sources of personal information in a dental practice <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Patient Information Sheet for new patients • Appointment diaries (electronic and paper) • Appointment diaries on website • Patient file – front cover, clinical notes, technician accounts, x-rays with patient identification, reports, pre-authorisation, reports, motivations, consent forms, health questionnaire, e-mail complaints or request for information from patient etc.

		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Referral to dental technician (workslips) • Referrals to specialists and reports from them • E-mail correspondences from and to patients and other providers • Medical scheme information, submission of claims, motivation and pre-authorisations, prescriptions etc • Details of dental suppliers, IT service providers, switching companies, other contractors whom you pay on a recurring basis. • Employees files • Financial information of debtors (other than patients) and creditors • Information on websites, social media platforms where cookies are used or online appointment, • Personal information on cellphones • Whatsapp and other apps • Computer records on hard drives and servers including cloud storage of patient files or lists • Correspondences with regulators such as HPCSA, SADTC, SAHPRA, CMS etc
STEP 3 –AUDIT CURRENT PROCESS USED TO PROCESS PERSONAL INFORMATION (COLLECT/RECORD/ STORE AND DISSEMINATE DATA)	Evaluate the current processing activities that are being undertaken by the business involving personal information and/or special personal information. Create a detailed list/schedule of these processing activities setting out: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • where the information is being processed; • what type of information is being processed; and • by whom the information is being processed. Evaluate all service agreements relating to data processing and update your contracts accordingly	Practitioners will have to assess if too much information is held and if level of detail is far more than required for providing services to patients. For example, in case of implant suppliers, patients may be identified only by their name or reference number for the purposes of return, identifying component, repair, replacement or refund. For example, in the case of technicians, only the patient’s name and a reference number need to be used on the workslip for the technician. If technician is claiming directly from patient or scheme, the technician will obtain personal information or obtain consent from patient to furnish personal information.
STEP 4 – REVIEW 8 CONDITIONS OF PROCESSING	1 ACCOUNTABILITY Who is responsible? s 8	Appointment of Information Officer discussed in Step 1 above The first condition places the blame squarely on the shoulders of the data processor and no one else. Doing so

PERSONAL INFORMATION ITO POPI ACT		makes it easier to investigate, cite, and punish violations of the law. Consequence of non-compliance to the POPIA could result in fines of up to R10 million and/or up to 10 years in jail time for some offences.
	2 PROCESSING LIMITATION What info can you collect and do you have permission? ss 9 - 12	Have you identified the specific method or tool you will use to collect the identified personal information? For example: automated forms, email, whatsapp, social media, website, manual forms etc Personal information must be collected directly from the data subject (patient), unless: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> a) the information is in a public record or made public by the patient; b) where patient is a child, that child has consented or parent or guardian has consented to collection of information from another source; c) information collected from another sources will not prejudice a legitimate interest of the data subject; d) where collection from another source is necessary— <ol style="list-style-type: none"> i. for maintenance of law ii. to comply with an obligation imposed by law iii. for any court proceedings or tribunal which has commenced iv. in the interests of national security or v. to maintain the legitimate interests of the patient or of a third party to whom the information is supplied; e) compliance would prejudice a lawful purpose of the collection; or 	National Health Act s15. Access to health records (1) A health worker or any health care provider that has access to the health records of a user may disclose such personal information to any other person, health care provider or health establishment as is necessary for any legitimate purpose within the ordinary course and scope of his or her duties where such access or disclosure is in the interests of the user. As long as you are processing personal information in the context of your ordinary day to day practice or the treatment and management of patients, you are not barred by the prohibition that applies as a general rule What justifies processing? Consent ito POPIA -means an voluntary, specific and informed expression of will in terms of which permission is given for the processing of personal information Consent is only one justification. It is recommended that dentists obtain consent in their daily practice. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • It is easy to prove in the event of a dispute • All parties know where they stand 	MULTI DISCIPLINARY TEAMS It is permissible in the ordinary course of a dental practice to deal with personal information. What about information that is shared or moved around and at the same time be compliant with POPIA. If you are discussing with the patient the sharing of personal information that you hold with your colleagues (for specialists referrals or second opinions), technicians, medical schemes, debt collectors, services providers, dental suppliers etc, if the patient has agreed to them involved in their care or for you to collect your fees, then there is no problem. Get consent in writing from them If the patient is unable to consent, but he/she requires treatment from a colleague, and you need to discuss their case, this would be also fine as it is for a legitimate interest and necessary for the proper treatment and care of the patient. When it comes to sharing information with a medical scheme, you should have informed consent of the patient (or the person authorised to consent) for all information shared with the scheme. While there might be exceptions, it is best to ensure

				<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ Anonymise patient names as far as possible ○ Obtain consent on admission and treatment discussion stage.
3 PURPOSE SPECIFICATION Is the info relevant, up to date and serving the correct purpose? s 13 & 14	Have you identified all the personal information that you currently require for your practice? The information must be collected only for a "specific, explicitly defined and lawful purpose" related to one of your normal activities. In case of dentists, it is to provide dental services, continuation of care, medical history submission of claims to schemes, sub-contract a technician or dental supplier etc. Is the patient (DS) aware of this purpose? One can also cite the National Health Act and the HPCSA ethical guidelines on record keeping, retention of records etc	Retention of Records POPI requires that you cannot hold onto records forever. Once you no longer need them for the processing purpose, you no longer have a right to keep them unless: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Retention is required by law (for example the Health Professions ethical rules on retention of records provide that you must retain them for at least 6 years after they become dormant or in case of children at least 3 years after they turn 18 years. Other legislations require a much longer retention period. Once you no longer have a right to hold onto the personal information or file, you must "destroy or delete...or de-identify" the record as soon as practical. The process should render the data irretrievable. Any destruction should be such that it cannot be reconstructed.
4 FURTHER PROCESSING LIMITATION Has the info purpose or processing changed? s 15	POPIA requires you to consider the relationship between further processing and the original purpose, the nature of the information, potential consequences of further processing, how you collected the data, and any contractual rights. When processing further information, you must consider the initial purpose of collecting the information was.	Unfortunately, POPI does not provide a defined list of what will constitute "compatibility". It rather answers the question in the negative. In practical terms, this means that you cannot collect personal information for a specifically defined purpose, and then use it for a purpose that is not linked to the original purpose at all. By way of example: As dentists, you collect information about your patients. If you

		You may process further information if it's necessary for the health of the patient or another individual. Below is where the practitioner can argue that the further processing will not be incompatible with the original purpose for processing: Consent If the patient consents to the further processing, the practitioner can further process it. Public record Its allowed if it is contained in the public record or patient makes it public (for example Facebook). Maintenance of the law If the further processing is necessary to maintain, comply with the law, or for court proceedings, or national security, it will be allowed. Health or safety threat If the further processing is necessary to prevent or mitigate a threat to public health or safety or the life/health of the data subject or another individual, further processing is allowed. Historical Statistical and Research purposes Further processing is allowed for these purposes, provided that the information is not in identifiable form. Regulator Exemption If the Regulator exempts it.	collect information for purposes of a specific dental treatment, you could possibly argue that if the patient returns after a period of time with another dental complaint, the information collected the first time, could be used under the "further processing" provisions of POPI – because the two reasons for processing are closely linked (both being for purposes of providing dental services to the patient – although the two consultations have got nothing to do with one another.)
	5 INFORMATION QUALITY How is the info kept up to date and relevant? s 16	Do you have a process in place if your patients/ suppliers/employees etc. would like to change or access their personal information? You have a responsibility to maintain their records and take reasonable, practical steps to ensure that the information is complete, accurate, not

		misleading and remains updated where necessary Accuracy is more assured if you obtain information directly from the DS. It is always advisable to validate the personal information as it is being captured. If it is not possible for the data subject to input their own information, or if the information is captured from one format to another (i.e. from a paper form to an IT system, then the information should be sent to the data subject for validation. When advising Data Subjects of the information you hold and for what purpose you hold it, they must be given details of how to update their information or withdraw consent. This procedure should be covered in the POPIA policies and procedures manual. It is advisable to develop procedures for automatically checking the accuracy of information on a regular basis, but sending a validation request to the data subjects.
6 OPENNESS Are you able to adequately share personal info with the owner of that info? s 17 to 18		Is the DS whose information aware you are collecting such personal information and for what purpose the information will be used? Do you let DSs know when you collect information? They should know: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Where you collect information• Where you don't collect information• The source of your information• Your practice's name and address	TRANSBORDER INFORMATION A practitioner may not transfer personal information outside of the country unless the recipient is in country with equivalent protection rules, or the patient has consented to it, transfer is necessary for the performance or conclusion of the contract or for the benefit of the patient and its not practical to obtain consent.

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Why you collect the data (your purpose) • Whether the collection is voluntary or mandatory • What happens if the data subject doesn't provide their data • Laws that allow data collection • If and when you intend to send the data to a third country Proof of consent to be retained to safeguard you against any complaint made by DS.	This will apply where the practitioner is reporting claim or complaint to a foreign indemnity provider. If cloud computing used, where servers hosted on the Internet to store, manage or process data, as opposed to a local network, the practitioner remains solely liable for establishing and maintaining the confidentiality and security measures in respect of the processing or retaining of personal information. If Cloud Computing Services is not domiciled in South Africa, the Responsible Party must further take reasonably practical steps to ensure that the service provider complies with the laws relating to the protection of personal information of the territory in which the service provider is domiciled.
7 SECURITY SAFEGUARDS Are you keeping all the data safe and secure? s 19 to 22	POPI expects from you as far as security measures: Integrity and confidentiality of personal information by taking technical and organisational measures (Personnel and how you deal with them as security measures/risks) against loss, damage, unauthorised destruction, unlawful access or processing of personal information. How do you store personal information and is it safe against unauthorised use? POPI only requires to you take “reasonable steps”. Thus, you do not need to put alarms or lasers but do not leave cabinets or offices unlocked. Paper Files and Information	NB – Health related PI is a special category under POPI for a reason –You can expect the Regulator to take breaches regarding this category of data very seriously. Your reception desk might be one of the most vulnerable locations in your entire practice. Why? Every patient you treat walks up to the reception desk and discusses their visit with the receptionist for at least a minute or two. What do they see when their eyes wander around that reception desk? What do they hear? What can they grab? Take a photo of? Possible violations on reception desks

		Are they in locked steel cabinets or locked filing room? Does receptionist have the key with a spare key in the safe? Do all staff have access to files or only designated staff members? Describe the protocols to be followed when requesting access or files. All designated and authorised health care professional staff only has access via receptionist and only for those patients being seen. Requests for copies of files are handled by the practice Information Officer The public should have no access at all such as contractors carrying out repairs or landlord's personnel for example. No patient files are left out, files that require billing are handed to finance immediately and when done, handed to reception to re-file. Files taken by doctor to write reports are left in his/her office for completion and then handed back for filing. Electronic Records The HPCSA rules on records require records must be password protected. All electronic records must be backed up on a daily, weekly or scheduled basis which back-ups are stored offsite. All changes to records must be initialled and signed by the dentist. Data Breaches No matter how well prepared you are, data breaches can happen. Notification must happen as soon as reasonably possible by informing the Information Regulator and the data	The most often POPIA violations one can glean at reception desks are things like: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Seeing the receptionists' open computer with the day's schedule, complete with full patient names• Computer and Wi-Fi passwords written on sticky notes, stuck to a computer monitor (in plain view to the public!)• Patient records on clipboards by the keyboard and easily viewable• Keys (probably to a back office) within arm's reach• Bulletin boards with new patient names and notes about patients• Unopened files which still identify name and address of patients• Patient messages for the dentist written on a pad of paper next to the phone on the reception desk, and in full view.• Recently received faxes left in plain view on the desk.• Recently printed prescriptions left sitting on the desk in plain view.• Unshredded patient records thrown in a trashcan shared by receptionists and waiting room patients.• Patient files placed in clear file holders, clearly viewable to anyone walking by.

	8 DATA SUBJECT PARTICIPATION Can clients freely see, correct or remove the data you are holding?	A patient is entitled to ask the practitioner free of charge if it hold personal information of the patient. This is where PAIA comes into effect. Under the Act, everyone is entitled to a copy of any information that pertains to them, regardless of the context. A patient may also request a record or a description of personal information held including any third parties who had or have access to such information. The request if submitted by another person such as an attorney, it must be submitted with a consent. In the case of a dental practice, the record isn't solely the patient's information – the doctor has made notes & those records contain their intellectual property. If the patient requests a copy of their information, there is a process to follow. The patient will need to complete a requester form stating why they want the information. May have access to this request within a reasonable time, on payment of a prescribed fee, in a reasonable format the is generally understandable.	The Regulator has reminded everyone that there is no such thing as a POPIA manual. At the present moment, you do not need to submit your PAIA manual to anyone. The regulator will publish a PAIA manual template on their website as soon as possible. It is currently in the final approval process. It will be user-friendly and people will be able to populate it. In the past private entities like dental practices were exempted from having to compile and submit a PAIA manual. Some practitioners also spent money to get their PAIA manual ready although prior to exemption being granted, SADA provided members with a template. Many organizations (especially SMEs) are currently exempt up until 1 July 2021 from having to have a PAIA Manual. The regulator has asked the Minister to extend the current exemption until 31 December 2021. DOCUMENT RETENTION, DATA PROTECTION AND DESTRUCTION PERIODS

The POPI Act, requires practitioner that process personal information, to only keep information “no longer than is necessary... to achieve its purpose”, subject to exceptions as required or authorised by law, required by a contract or subject to consent of patients.

Retention of Records

Owing to various legislative requirements, documents must be retained for a certain number of years, depending on the legislation. This guide refers to the legislation and identifies the timeframe in which certain documents have to be kept by dental practitioners.

There is no legal requirement (i.e. legislation or case law) that stipulates the period of time that practitioners need to keep their clinical records. However, the ethical rules of HPCSA provide for retention periods for dental records. These ethical rules if not observed, could render the practitioner liable for unprofessional or unethical conduct.

Health Professions Act 56 of 1974, Ethical Rules & Booklets	Dental Records	6 years after they become dormant i.e from date when you last saw patient Children patients – when the child reaches 21 years	This would include study models, x-rays and clinical notes, certificate, reports etc
	Prescriptions	5 years as per Meds Act or they become dormant
	Medical devices	Medical devices: not stipulated
	Mentally incompetent patients	For duration of person's lifetime

Medical Schemes Act 121 of 1998	Claims to medical schemes, pre-authorisation and motivations	Claims must be made within 4 months into regulations Schemes sometimes claw back and investigate for periods or around 3 years after the claim was lodged. Complaints may also be lodged long after payment is made and thus keep records for longer if practical
Medicines and Related Substances Act 101 of 1965, Medical Device Regulations	Prescriptions / Dispensing	Medicines: 5 years or 5 years after last entry in a prescription book for dispensing dentists). No provision for device prescriptions or orders.
	Implantable devices	Order records must be kept for 5 years after expected life of device
Occupational Health & Safety Act 130 of 1993	Employee (claimant) records. (earnings, time worked, overtime, etc.)	4 years after last entry, except where regs under OHSA on specific conditions
	Employee records relating to re-opened claims	Not prescribed,
	Medical reports	4 years after last entry, except where regs under OHSA on
